

Gentlemen,

Indiana's Attorney General advises me that The Consumer Bankers Assn. is attempting to turn Indiana's 'Do Not Call' law on it's ear in favor of the much weaker federal law. I'm on Indiana's 'Do Not Call' list for nearly a year and the change is startling. I would like to say it has stopped all phone solicitation; it hasn't but it's a vast improvement from before this law. I have no problem with a firm with whom I already do business call me concerning current business matters but I DO NOT want them calling me trying to sell me new products and services. I pay for my phone service and I presently own my phone equipment - thanks to deregulation - and I until all of that changes I don't want to be bothered.

Respectfully,

Wm. Goshorn
